

Validation

I think that the main idea of the video "Validate" is in this world we live in, we sometimes need people to validate our gift as individuals before we can appreciate our existence. In this video, the main character is able to see those things that we as persons sometimes don't even care about. This guy has a positive disposition in life that whoever he meets he says sometime positive that really impacts their lives. A real smile was the only thing he was asking from each of these persons he has encounter with. The parking validation was used as a metaphor.

I can connect this to the world because this "video" "Validation" is making the people feel that they're special in a unique way just like the main character did, he gives the customers free parking and a free compliment to make them feel good about their selves. This film shows the world of how we can all make a better world and by sharing a smile and a few kind words to the world. This film can inspire lots of people in a small way to make them feel good to their selves.
